Panel Questions and Comments

- Regarding the roof structure, will the original roof rafters be retained as part of the post and beam for the interior working space? Matt Phillips: Yes, except for the modification of one rafter beneath the trapezoidal structure.
- Can you look up into the trusses? Matt Phillips: The trusses will be visible from the ground floor through the stairwell opening of the new floor.
- What materials will be used for the ceiling? Matt Phillips: Drywall.
- Will the wood timber trusses require more supports? Matt: The trusses will need to be strengthened in the northeast corner to increase the bearing capacity.
- The glass roof in the centre is a nice feature. Has an opening in the second floor been considered to bring light through to the ground floor? Mike Moody: A pyramidal skylight will bring light into the lobby off of Store Street.
- Reference was made to the Salt Building in Vancouver in which the trusses are visible from the ground floor. Could a similar design be considered for this building?
- The brick needs work. Will a conservation plan be prepared? Matt Phillips: Repointing is part of the project.
- It is commendable that the entire building rather than only the façade will be retained; however, conservation and maintenance plans are recommended.
