"An Official Community Plan (OCP) is one of the most important guiding documents for a community. It is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region.

It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit."

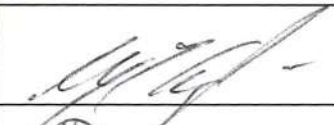

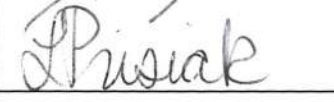

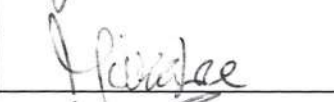

(<http://www.victoria.ca/EN/main/departments/planning-development/community-planning/official-community-plan.html>)

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village as a Large Urban Village thereby allowing six story buildings, overriding the Local Area Plan of 2006 and disregarding "the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place" that is Cook Street Village.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP. Decrease the allowable height of new building design in Cook Street Village to sustain its "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place".

The City of Victoria website reads: "An Official Community Plan (OCP) is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change for the whole city over the next 25 years. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region."

"It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit." (OCP)

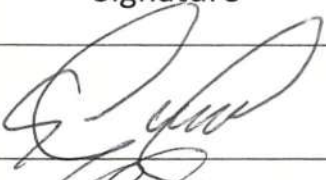

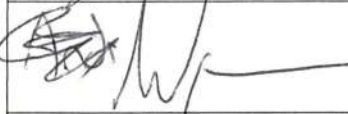

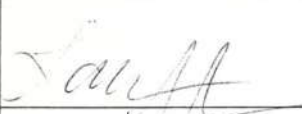

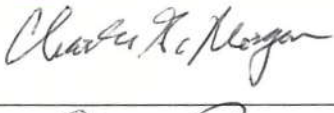

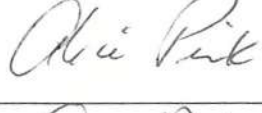

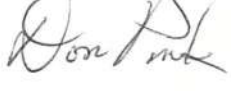

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village as a Large Urban Village thereby allowing six story buildings, overriding the Local Area Plan of 2006 and disregarding "the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place" that is Cook Street Village.

Under the recently approved zoning, the full extent of the village could be re-developed with six story buildings. The first such proposal is before the Planning Department now for a building along Cook Street at Oliphant Avenue.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP. Decrease the allowable height of new building design in Cook Street Village to sustain its "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place".

"An Official Community Plan (OCP) is one of the most important guiding documents for a community. It is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region.

It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit."

The Future of Cook Street Village

169-171 14

The City of Victoria website reads: "An Official Community Plan (OCP) is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change for the whole city over the next 25 years. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region. "

"It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit." (OCP)

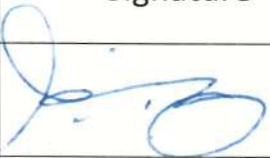

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village as a Large Urban Village thereby allowing six story buildings, overriding the Local Area Plan of 2006 and disregarding "the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place" that is Cook Street Village.

Under the recently approved zoning, the full extent of the village could be re-developed with six story buildings. The first such proposal is before the Planning Department now for a building along Cook Street at Oliphant Avenue.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP. Decrease the allowable height of new building design in Cook Street Village to sustain its "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place".

"An Official Community Plan (OCP) is one of the most important guiding documents for a community. It is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region.

It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit."

(<http://www.victoria.ca/EN/main/departments/planning-development/community-planning/official-community-plan.html>)

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village as a Large Urban Village thereby allowing six story buildings, overriding the Local Area Plan of 2006 and disregarding "the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place" that is Cook Street Village.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP. Decrease the allowable height of new building design in Cook Street Village to sustain its "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place".

The Future of Fairfield Gonzales Neighbourhoods

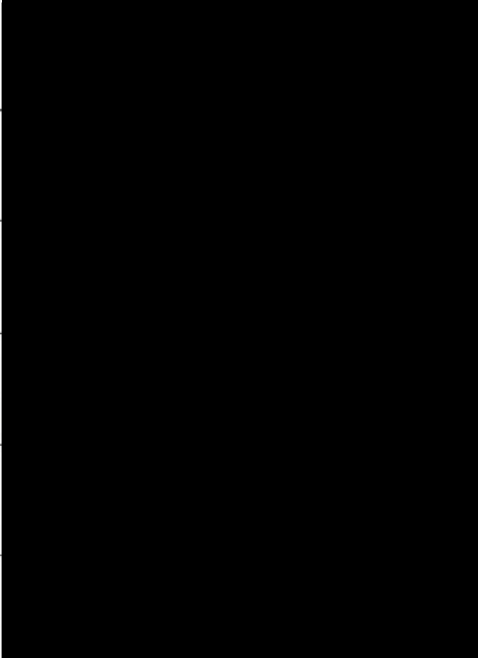

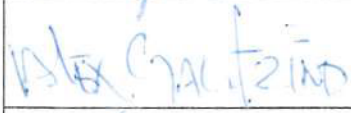

The City of Victoria website reads: "An Official Community Plan (OCP) is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change in a community. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region." The OCP has implications for all of Victoria to 2040 and beyond.

The website continues: "It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit."

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village and Ross Bay Village (Thrifty Foods Plaza) as Large Urban Villages thereby allowing six story buildings, disregarding their "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place". Under the recent approved zoning, the full extent of Cook Street Village, for example, could be re-developed with six story buildings. The first such proposal is before the Planning Department this summer, for a building at Cook Street and Oliphant Avenue.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP to ensure that new building design in Victoria's Large Urban Villages can genuinely recognize the "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city". July 201

"An Official Community Plan (OCP) is one of the most important guiding documents for a community. It is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region.

It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the *unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit."

"It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit." (OCP)

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village as a Large Urban Village thereby allowing six story buildings, overriding the Local Area Plan of 2006 and disregarding "the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place" that is Cook Street Village.

Under the recently approved zoning, the full extent of the village could be re-developed with six story buildings. The first such proposal is before the Planning Department now for a building along Cook Street at Oliphant Avenue.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP. Decrease the allowable height of new building design in Cook Street Village to sustain its "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place".

The Future of Cook Street Village

The City of Victoria website reads: "An Official Community Plan (OCP) is a 30-year plan that provides direction for growth and change for the whole city over the next 25 years. Victoria's new OCP focuses on vibrant, walkable villages and town centres while maintaining the downtown core as the heart of the region. "

"It introduces a new approach to land-use management by recognizing the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place of different parts of the city, and emphasizes sustainable transportation such as walking, cycling, and transit." (OCP)

Victoria's new OCP designates Cook Street Village as a Large Urban Village thereby allowing six story buildings, overriding the Local Area Plan of 2006 and disregarding "the unique neighbourhood character and sense of place" that is Cook Street Village.

Under the recently approved zoning, the full extent of the village could be re-developed with six story buildings. The first such proposal is before the Planning Department now for a building along Cook Street at Oliphant Avenue.

To Victoria Mayor and Council:

Please listen to residents and amend the OCP. Decrease the allowable height of new building design in Cook Street Village to sustain its "unique neighbourhood character and sense of place".
